Who will be the next mayor?

How Courtney, Berry see issues ahead for Madison

Courier staff report

Madison mayoral candidates — Republican Bob Courtney and Democrat Julie Berry — last weekend took on some of the issues in this mayoral election in separate sessions with The Madison Courier. The sessions were taped by WKMNews, but the video responses will be posted on www.madisoncourier.com

Both candidates were given a list of paper with the same questions and asked to respond in as close to three minutes as possible. They were taped separately but in the same studio setting.

Their answers appear in print in today's issue of the Courier and are on www.madisoncourier.com to be watched in video. In addition, the Courier is posting the audio responses as well for anyone who just wants to listen.

These are the questions that were given to the candidates:

1. What are the top initiatives you would undertake to spur job growth and economic development?

2. What are the top initiatives you would take to reduce crimes driven by drug users and trafficking, such as theft and property?

3. What would you do to try to create an environment that encourages Madison's young people to remain in the community?

4. About half of Madison's population lives downtown, yet there has been no grocery downtown for almost two years. What do you plan to do about that?

5. At some point in the next 18 months, Madison is likely reach the point where it takes in S.R. 56 from Hanover Hill and through Madison on Main Street as part of its network to maintain. Would you make changes in the roadway through downtown? Where will the city obtain the increased funds for maintenance?

6. Much concern has been expressed publicly that the number of homeless people in Madison is increasing. Do you believe that to be true? What will you do to care for those now homeless and to try to make sure the numbers do not increase?

7. Your choice (Each candidate was given three minutes to discuss any topic of choice)

Republican Bob Courtney

Democrat Julie Berry

Included in this package is a list of all the candidates on the Nov. 5 ballot as well as a list of the voting precincts and their locations.

Raincoats for trick or treat?

The weekend's wet weather was a welcome end to the dry weather that has plagued the area. But the forecast may not be quite as good for trick-or-treaters. Thursday's forecast is for a high near 61, but with an 80% chance of precipation. The showers are expected to continue into the evening. Canida Dentistry wants to remind parents who may have excess Halloween candy that they will be accepting candy donations Nov. 4, from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. at their office at 904 E. First St.. The office will pay $3 per pound of candy, give each child a treat bag and have face painting and an inflatable obstacle course. More about Halloween night activities in the Community section, C1. Wildfires rage in California evacuations

SANTA ROSA, California (AP) — The Pacific Gas & Electric Co. utility says its power lines may have started two wildfires over the weekend in the San Francisco Bay Area.

The company reported the incidents near the town of Lafayette to state regulators on Monday.

PG&E told the California Public Utilities Commission that a worker responded to the first fire around 4:45 p.m. Sunday and was told firefighters believe contact between a power line and a communication line may have caused it.

A worker went to another fire about an hour later and was told firefighters are investigating a transformer as a possible ignition source.

PG&E is under severe financial pressure after its equipment has been blamed for a series of destructive wildfires in Northern California.

Northern California firefighters during the night made an aggressive effort to attack a fire burning in Sonoma County's wine country, fearing it would reach the town of Windsor. The 28,000 residents have been evacuated.

California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection Jonathan Cox said Monday that firefighters brought in what he called significant resources to fight the wildfire.

The fire started last week and has been fanned by extremely heavy winds. It has destroyed 96 buildings so far and threatens 80,000 structures in several wine country communities.

It was only 5 percent contained. Nearly 200,000 people remain under evacuation orders because of a fire threat.

Classes have been canceled at the University of California, Los Angeles because of the wildfire raging in the city that has prompted evacuation orders for 10,000 homes and businesses.

UCLA said in a statement Monday that the fire poses no threat to the campus but that many UCLA community members live in evacuation areas or could face difficulties commuting because of road closures.

The fire started at about 1:30 a.m. on the west side of Interstate 405 in the Sepulveda Pass that passes through the Santa Monica Mountains and has moved west. UCLA's campus is on the eastern side of the highway.

Classes in Northern California have been canceled for 40 school districts in Sonoma County north of San Francisco because of a large wildfire.

Classes are also canceled at the University of California, Berkeley, because of pre-emptive power outages aimed at preventing utility infrastructure from sparking fires.

Kentucky gov's race stirs clash over casino suicide claims

By BRUCE SCHREINER
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — Entering the final days of Kentucky's bitter race for governor, Republican incumbent Matt Bevin exposed himself to a new attack by flatly denying his recorded claim that suicides happen nightly in casinos.

Telling a debate audience Saturday night that the truth matters, Bevin challenged his opponent to produce a tape proving his denial wrong. Democrat Andy Beshear offered up the audiotape Sunday.

The televised exchange turned Bevin's summer radio interview on WKDZ into a talking point for Democrats heading into the last full week of campaigning in the close gubernatorial contest. In the interview, Bevin claimed, without offering evidence, that suicides occur on a nightly basis in casinos.

The exchange highlighted the rancor between the two rivals, which intensified when Beshear, as the state's attorney general, repeatedly sued the governor for several of his policy and executive decisions.

It also was an extension of their ongoing disagreement over legalizing casino gambling to raise state revenues. Beshear supports the idea and wants to funnel the state's share of tax money into struggling public pension systems. Bevin, who has struggled in his efforts to pass comprehensive pension reform in his first term, calls casino gambling "fool's gold" and said it has no chance of passing the GOP-dominated legislature.

In the late July interview on WKDZ, Bevin is recorded claiming gambling-related suicides in casinos are nightly occurrences as he discussed what he saw as societal costs related to casino gambling.

"Every night somewhere in America, somebody takes their life in a casino because they've wasted the last semblance of dignity and hope that they had," Bevin said. "Families are ruined. Lives are ruined."

A top American Gaming Association executive had previously termed the remarks as "patently false and irresponsible."

The comments resurfaced Saturday night amid one of several combative exchanges between Bevin and Beshear. The Democrat said the governor's remarks were another example of Bevin's false statements as they argued over Kentucky's settlement with the manufacturer of the prescription painkiller OxyContin.

Bevin claims Beshear profited from Kentucky's settlement with the drug company as a partner at a law firm that defended the company. Beshear denies any involvement in the $24 million settlement — reached by his predecessor in office — and notes that as attorney general he's sued multiple opioid makers and distributors.

"This is just more of the same from a governor who says that someone commits suicide on a casino floor every night," Beshear said.

Bevin replied: "I don't know where this comment about the casinos is. I've never said anything like that in my life. That's absolute malarkey."

Beshear responded that Bevin's remarks were on tape.

"No, it isn't on tape," Bevin countered. "You're not telling the truth. Again, the truth matters. And if it's on tape, I want you to produce that tape and show people where I said this happens on the floor of casinos."

Beshear pounded away at the governor's denial on Sunday, attaching Bevin's audiotaped remarks in a social media post that said: "You asked for the tape, so we found it for you."

"Kentuckians deserve a governor who respects them enough to not deny the very things they've said," Beshear said.

Bevin's campaign did not immediately respond to an email and a text seeking comments.

Technically, Beshear's claim that the governor referred to suicides on casino floors was off the mark. Bevin referred to casinos in general in the interview with the Cadiz, Kentucky, radio station.

It wasn't the first time Bevin was accused of exaggerating the consequences of moves by his opponents. When teachers swarmed Kentucky's Capitol to protest pension and education proposals he supported, the governor twice associated their absence from classrooms with harm to children, offering no evidence in either instance. Bevin felt compelled to apologize the first time but then made the second unfounded assertion to criticize another statehouse rally.

The candidates have two more scheduled debates. Bevin also is expecting a visit on the eve of the Nov. 5 election from President Donald Trump at a rally in Lexington, Kentucky.

Indiana lawmaker pushes government corruption hotline

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — Indiana residents soon could have a hotline for reporting improper or illegal spending and other suspected corruption by local government officials, if lawmakers approve a proposal being drafted by a legislative committee. Sen. Victoria Spartz said Indiana taxpayers have no clear place to go if they suspect officials are being unethical, and a single, state-run hotline would ensure their concerns are investigated, The (Northwest Indiana) Times reported. Spartz suggested the State Board of Accounts, which regularly audits the spending of all local governments, run the hotline in conjunction with the office of the Indiana Inspector General, which investigates corruption by state officials and workers. The committee wants the hotline proposal to be considered during the legislative session that begins in January.

Former retreat now addiction center

HENRYVILLE — A former corporate retreat in southern Indiana has reopened as a drug addiction treatment center. The Wooded Glen Recovery Center started taking patients during September. Community leaders joined executives of treatment provider Summit BHC for an opening ceremony this past week. The News and Tribune reported the center is amid 600 wooded acres near Henryville. The grounds include three miles of trails and two lakes stocked for fishing. Center CEO Steve Mitchell the goal is to create a peaceful environment. The Tennessee-based company said the center is its 18th facility nationwide. Federal reports show Indiana had a record 1,840 overdose deaths in 2017, up 37% from two years earlier.

Patoka dam to warn of dangerous currents

JASPER— The Jasper Common Council approved an ordinance last week calling for warning signs to be placed around a dam on the Patoka River. The (Jasper) Herald reported the signs warning of the dam's drowning risks should go up within six weeks. Jasper is about 40 miles northeast of Evansville. Low-head dams create a circular current at the dam's base that keeps victims trapped beneath the surface until the turbulent water spits them out. Jasper's safety director, Cale Knies, said the signs are a response to the growing number of people visiting the area where the dam is located.

Mayor to name police chief after resignations

MICHIGAN CITY — The mayor of Michigan City will name a new police chief this week after the resignations of three senior officers. Mayor Ron Meer said he'll have a news conference Tuesday. Police Chief Mark Swistek and assistant chiefs Royce Williams and Kevin Urbanczyk announced their resignations last week after a disagreement with the mayor over the Laporte County Drug Task Force. Swistek said Meer directed him to end the department's participation in the task force. The mayor later apologized for what he said during a "private, heated discussion." He said he won't pull Michigan City out of the group. Meer said he's been under stress since the arrest of a stepson on a drug charge. The chief and assistant chiefs are expected to remain with the police department but in different roles.

4th USS Indianapolis commissioned at port

BURNS HARBOR— The Navy has commissioned its new USS Indianapolis combat vessel at Burns Harbor along Lake Michigan. The ceremony Saturday drew dignitaries, Navy officials, four survivors of the ship's namesake sunk during World War II and family members of current crew members. Gov. Eric Holcomb, a Navy veteran, noted the Freedom-class littoral ship was made with Indiana steel. He also said the ship carries a "historic legacy" of the second USS Indianapolis that was sunk by a Japanese submarine in July 1945 while returning from delivering key components for the Hiroshima atomic bomb. Only 317 of its nearly 1,200 crewmen survived the sinking and days in shark-infested waters. The new ship will be based near Jacksonville, Florida.

Kentucky

Coal baron's companies owe $2.3M taxes

INEZ — Seven coal companies controlled by a former University of Kentucky trustee owe $2.3 million in overdue taxes to one of the state's poorest counties. The Lexington Herald-Leader reported James Booth acts as president or director of more than 30 companies in Kentucky, seven of which owe delinquent taxes in Martin County. All seven are tied to the coal industry, and each owes between $55,000 and $1.39 million to Martin County, which has made headlines in recent years for its failure to properly fund its sheriff's office and water district. Booth was a member of the UK Board of Trustees until earlier this year. He told the paper his companies simply don't have enough money to pay taxes and keep the mines operating. "We would have already paid (the taxes) if we could, and we will pay them. We'll pay them as fast as we can," he said. Booth's delinquent taxes would boost the local school system by $555,170. The state would receive more than $315,000, and the county government would get more than $101,000. The library and extension office would each receive more than $70,000. County attorneys can sue for delinquent property taxes, but so far the county attorney's office has not done so. Martin County Attorney Melissa Phelps, who took office after the 2018 election, declined to comment on Booth's delinquent bills.

Henderson house fire kills 1 as 1 escapes

HENDERSON — Police say a man has been killed in a house fire in western Kentucky. Kentucky State Police said in a news release the fire occurred early Monday in Henderson. A female who was inside the residence reported the fire and was able to escape. The statement said an autopsy was scheduled later Monday to determine the man's identity. The cause of the fire is under investigation. Henderson is about 130 miles west of Louisville, Kentucky.

Teacher charged with raping girl, 13

GLASGOW — Barren County Sheriff's Office Public Information Deputy Mike Houchens told the Bowling Green Daily News that Barren County Middle School teacher William Kyle Gardner, 27, was charged Saturday with second-degree rape of a 13-year-old girl and first-degree sexual abuse and tampering with evidence. An arrest citation obtained by the news outlet said Gardner admitted to deputies in an interview that he had sex with an underage female student on three occasions. A statement on the Barren County Schools Facebook page said officials are cooperating with law enforcement and will take action to "protect students."

Who will be the next mayor?

Questions continues on Page 6

Courier staff report

Bob Courtney was Jefferson County Republican Party chair when he announced his candidacy, but resigned that party position soon after.

Courtney, who grew up in downtown Madison, also was president of the City of Madison's Board of Zoning Appeals and a member of the Lide White Memorial Boys & Girls Club Board of Directors, the Madison Area Chamber of Commerce and Friends of Main Street Program. At the death of former Mayor Damon Welch, Courtney was appointed by the Republican Party to fill out Welch's unexpired term.

He is a 1981 graduate of Madison Consolidated High School, earned a bachelor's degree in finance from Ball State University, a graduate degree at the University of Delaware and earned additional advanced accounting degrees from Indiana University Southeast. He is formally licensed as a certified public accountant.

Courtney said he retired from Boston Financial Investment Management where he originated more than $5 billion in investment capital for affordable housing and historic preservation.

Courtney said his campaign will focus on three primary strategies: "Our Community Safety, Our Economic Opportunity, and Our Quality of Life."

"I have traveled across the country in my professional career forging partnerships with private developers, investors, and local governments to bring capital investment to their communities, construct affordable housing, and promote economic development using historic, low-income, and new markets tax credits."

Republican Bob Courtney

Courtney's wife, Tammy, is an intensive care nurse at King's Daughters Hospital. They have two children, Miles, 28, of Madison, and Lindsay, 25, of Savannah, Georgia.

"Growing up in downtown Madison on North Walnut Street as the son of a truck driver and stay-at-home mother, I learned the value of hard work," Courtney said. "This work ethic along with the mentorship of several people along the way has inspired me to believe that anything is possible if we believe in ourselves, set goals, do the work necessary to attain them, and aspire to inspire others through collaboration and thoughtful strategies.

Democrat Julie Berry

Courier staff report

Julie Berry announced her candidacy July, 16, 2018, the first mayoral candidate to make an official announcement.

She is a Madison resident, served on the Jefferson County Commission for three terms and was Special Projects Administrator for Madison in the 1980s.

"Following the abrupt closure of the Marble Hill Nuclear Plant, it was necessary to work hard on industrial development. I was part of teams that attracted Arvin Sango, Madison Precision Products and Century Tube industrial plants to Madison. I understand how to network, promote, and seal deals for our community," Berry said in a news release. "I think it is time to bring in bold ideas, methods, and action to ensure our city's growth and sustainable future."

Berry, a Democrat, was the first female County Commissioner in Jefferson County. In 2014, she lost the State Senate District 45 race to incumbent Republican Jim Smith in what was a Republican landslide in the state.

Smith won the race 54 percent to Berry's 46 percent. Berry, a Madison resident, won Jefferson County with 53 percent of the vote and captured Scott County, but lost in Switzerland, Clark and Jackson counties.

Berry has been married for 33 years to Pat Berry. She is the mother of two children and grandmother of two. She is a graduate of Ball State University and the National Development Council Economic Development Professional Course Program. She has worked the past 10 years as Senior Marketing Executive for Midwestern Engineers Inc.

"I will bring my perspective as a mother, a local government official, and a private sector businessperson to this important job. I will listen carefully to make sure I represent the values and concerns of my community.

"I was chosen by my fellow elected officials to chair the Region 9 Indiana Homeland Security District Plan Oversight Committee, and have experience with Workforce Development, Emergency Management Services, Enhanced 911 Services, and various community development efforts. I am committed to Madison," said Berry.

What are the top initiatives you would take to reduce crimes driven by drug users and trafficking, such as theft and property?

Berry

"Substance abuse is the No. 1 issue that I see for the City of Madison and one of the reasons I'm running for mayor. I see that our jail is completely overcrowded and I have brought up the idea of helping with a quarter house, which would be the first step between the jail and a halfway house, so that we can get some of the people that are under the substance abuse scurge into recovery if they want to be and they are willing to work at getting off it. I do feel like things we could do would have to do with public safety and Madison Police Department. They have reinstituted foot and bicycle patrols and I think that's helping. I'm hearing anecdotal incidents of that helping already. I think it's a good move and I would build upon it. I also have obtained about five or six common nuisance ordinances from around the state that would comply with Indiana laws but also would be applicable here. An airtight common nuisance ordinance could help with blighted properties and properties where our public safety personnel are called repeatedly to arrest or take care of all kinds of drug related abuses. What would happen would be that the owners of those facilities would be fined to cover the costs of those public services. I think it should be a deterrent and they might start policing themselves which would be ideal. The Victoria Inn in Madison was a perfect example of how this could happen and I was unfortunate enough to grow up across the street from an apartment complex owned by the same family, and so I can relate somewhat to what some of the people in that area went through. It took too long to close it and and I think an airtight common nuisance ordinance would have sped that process along and we have to enforce the ordinances that we have. Also, things I would do to address this is the Madison Police Department has a rapid turnover rate. It's become something of a revolving door. We train officers at the police academy, etcetera, and then they leave to go someplace else where they can make more money or have a better working environment or for various reasons. So, I think that we need to establish comparable or better salaries for the places that are around us and I have a plan to do that in my public safety plan. And also work on everything we can do to increase moral, equipment and training opportunities for the dedicated officers that we do have and build on that."

Courtney

"What I want to make sure that we're doing to address crime — and community safety is the hallmark or cornerstone of my platform. We have published our platform from the very beginning and that was designed through lots of conversations with our community, our law enforcement, residents in the neighborhood, businesses, investors and other elected leaders and community leaders — making sure we have a safe community is paramount. That drives everything else. It will drive the quality of life, it will drive investment in our community, it drives the quality of place for example, tourism and so forth. So we need to make sure that first and foremost that we have a safe community. We're going to use data to guide our initiatives. What I have proposed from the very beginning is a few things: One, we need to make sure we reduce the amount of turnover with Madison Police Department. I propose that we re-evaluate the salary and reward structure with Madison Police Department so that we're competitive with areas surrounding the City of Madison. I propose that we start with increasing salaries and wages by 10%. I mentioned we're going to use data to drive our efforts — we're going to incorporate resources such as computer-aided dispatch systems for example and more structure on the reporting side so we know where our problems are and the types of problems we're having. Based on the information that I have collected so far, it appears that our crime rate is up about 14%. That's based on the statistics that the Madison Police Department has provided me. We do know that a lot of that is drug related and we're going to be taking steps to include more deterent action and we're going to assertively combat substance abuse issues. One of the things we're going to do there is really evaluate our role with the Jefferson County Drug Task Force. We'll make sure we're working collaboratively with the Indiana State Police, the sheriff's department, Hanover Police Department and other law enforcement agencies within our community. I want to make Madison the safest place to live, work, raise a family and visit and we're only going to be able to accomplish those goals through active policing and community engagement. I'm very pleased to see that our community engagement is increasing. Several community watch groups in our neighborhoods have started and also the city of Madison police just recently published a new tip line that each shift commander, for example, will have access to that anybody calling with an immediate and urgent tip can do so anonymously and the police department can react to that very quickly. The last thing is safe ways to get around town — better lighting and better sidewalks — we can't have our children and our seniors walking in the streets for example. We need to make that sure we have passable and safe, visible sidewalks and areas for our community to walk around."

What would you do to try and create an environment that encourages Madison's young people to remain in the community?

Berry

"The first thing that I would do is try very hard and work out a data-driven plan to attract IT and analytical jobs. I mentioned earlier that our median household income in Madison lags that of the state of Indiana. So we have to try to get those professional jobs here, as well as partner with Cub Manufacturing and our family of businesses to try to also have skilled labor jobs that people that go through those programs — Ivy Tech Southeast as well — can move into good paying jobs, I feel that's a priority. I think placemaking is also an issue. We have strong festivals, a great music scene and for young people that want to be here, we have to also increase our walkability, and I think we're still working on all of those things. Madison is not in bad shape when it comes to placemaking — we're really in pretty good shape and we have probably Mayor Welch and his administration, and previous administrations, to thank for that. I mentioned the IT and data and analytical jobs; we have to also work on our digital divide, our broadband digital divide. We're middle of the road, and by that I mean high speed internet. We're middle of the road, but based on our location, pretty far off the interstate, etcetera, we have to be better than middle of the road. We have to be toward the top, and I think that we can take innovative ways to get there. I'd also like to do something kind of innovative and that is work on an alumni recruitment program. I would like to take some of those people who have already left after college or graduation from a trade school or whatever it might be, and try to remind them how great Madison is and recruit them back here when it's time to raise their family. Particularly those people that are in those IT, data or analytical jobs so that we might be able to offer housing incentives or other types of incentives for those entrepreneurs and skilled people that want to come back here but perhaps need a nudge to do so. We've had a population decrease here since 1970, our population has dropped by close to 1,500 people, and we need to make that a part of our planning for the City of Madison and also badly need to address that median household income figure that lags that of the state."

Courtney

"As it relates to doing things that encourage our youth to remain in our community, we really need to be, again, better engaged with our employers and our school systems, and that goes for Ivy Tech Community College, all of our public school systems in the City of Madison — that includes Prince of Peace and the Christian Academy — as well as Southwestern since it does border Madison. And then also Hanover College. We need to be looking at what the needs of our workforce is and workforce development. And we're already making progress there. The City of Madison under my administration will continue to support initiatives through our school system that support Cub Manufacturing, for example, Cub Engineering and I'm wanting to make sure that we're partnering with the school system for vocational training and education as well. We need to make sure that we're not only training manufacturing skill, but technical skill, IT skill sets, creating a recruiting environment for law enforcement, for example, but also the other trades. As it relates to professional occupations, I mentioned earlier that we need to make sure that we're taking advantage of all of the things that are going on around us. And what that's going to require is a concerted effort to look at the jobs in the future — what do we need to do to bring our youth home. We know that investing in quality of place and quality of life are meaningful initiatives that will attract our youth to want to work here. We'll take advantage of those jobs, for example, that might be able to work remotely. But I want to make sure we're investing in a different type of employment, technology for example, or trying to cultivate healthcare opportunities. So a lot of the things that we're talking about here is using public policy in a way that we are partnering with our employers and educators, for example, in our community, as well as working with the state through Indiana Economic Development Committee, OCRA, which is the Office of Community and Rural Affairs, and do destination development, job creation, job development, workforce development — there's so many things that we can do. I have the leadership skills, the resources and the experience from an investment perspective to make sure that we're leading Madison in the right direction. So not only can we grow our population, we can increase our household income, and start really changing the demographics of our community, where we have to a certain extent seen a decline over the course of the last decade."

At some point in the next 18 months, Madison is likely to reach the point where it takes in S.R. 56 from Hanover Hill and through Madison on Main Street as part of its network to maintain. Would you make changes in the roadway through downtown? Where will the city obtain the increased funds for maintenance?

Berry

"I haven't been a county commissioner since 2012, but I did attend Purdue Road School 12 years in a row which makes me somewhat of — and I say this in jest — a roads scholar. I am concerned about the maintenance involved in taking over State Road 56, Main Street to the top of Hanover Hill to the east end of our city. I'm concerned about the cost involved with that and we probably would look toward Community Crossing funds, which is a program the state of Indiana offers and Madison and Jefferson County have both been successful in obtaining these funds for that. The deal itself was, I believe, a good one because it is giving us new bridge approaches. The Welch administration worked out that deal. I was not in the room so it is not for me to second guess the wisdom of it. But I do understand why it happened. We needed better bridge approaches to help us in our economic development and traffic flow. That's the reason for it. I know at one time angle parking had been discussed and I heard a lot of concerns from people about that and I believe that it's been ruled out. Bump-outs were also instituted for a little while — a little cafe-type bump-out where you could sit kind of in the middle of oncoming traffic — and I think people were a little bit anxious about that, and I think that idea has also been discarded, but we do have a master plan that talks about what we can do and I will be looking into that. I am very interested in cooperating with Jefferson County whenever we can and I will give you a couple of instances where we did that before. We have a DuraPatcher at the Jefferson County Highway Department — I believe we have two machines — and I think the City of Madison has one and the county built the tower needed for the contents that you use in that DuraPatcher for longtime patch work and it worked pretty well. I'm going to look for other opportunities like that to cooperate with Jefferson County. And we've done this before. The City of Madison and Jefferson County help each other out and I'll leave two examples. After the tornado in 2011 and 2012, the City of Madison helped the county move debris, ectetera, and helped us get roads open. The City of Madison and Jefferson County have a mutual aide type of agreement and we need to build upon that definitely. It won't be easy to maintain the 3 or 4 miles of additional roadway the state is going to turn over but it's going to happen. They're going to turn it over to the City of Madison sometime early next year. But I think that we have the resources if we put our heads together and get that done at the very best cost to the taxpayer through partnership opportunities, with the state and our surrounding area."

Courtney

"Over the course of the last five years the City of Madison entered into an agreement with the Indiana Department of Transportation for a project called the Bridge approach. It was a continuation of a new approach off of the Milton-Madison Bridge that would essentially more safely drive the traffic flow up onto Main Street, Highway 421 and then north into North Madison and then around to the connecting highways. What that entails is a road transfer agreement. The City of Madison will undertake, probably by next summer for example, the acquisition or transfer of 4.5 miles of State Highway 56, which is a four-lane highway that includes several bridges beginning at Jefferson Street, through downtown Madison's Main Street and up Hanover Hill. What that agreement doesn't entail, which is something that I wish that it did, is for road upgrades to occur before that transfer happens. One of the things I'll be doing immediately after being elected is working with INDOT to evaluate that agreement, as well as additional factors that are playing into the bridge approach construction project. It's a comprehensive project that's going to take awhile. We need to do our best with regard to gateway improvements as it relates to the bridge approach. But more importantly we've got to find the funds in order to upgrade and redevelop — or re-envision — Madison's Main Street. The good news is we have several organizations that have already been giving some thought to this, but under my leadership we will organize a committee, we will evaluate the best way to control traffic safely and we'll also look at ways to have this be an economic development opportunity for us, so that we can attract more business, more small business recruitment. And in the past couple of years, Madison has been successful in receiving significant Community Crossings grant funds for road improvements. With my relationship from our state representatives, state senators, all the way up to the Indiana Department of Transportation and to the Governor's Office, I'll make sure that Madison is well-represented not only in the negotiation of the remaining agreements that are going to be necessary to effectively transfer the roads that we are talking about, but to make sure we find the funding necessary. But I'll also be collaborating with Madison Main Street, our Chamber of Commerce, Visit Madison, as well as our economic development apparatuses and local business leaders and community leaders to make sure we have the right buy-in, as well as the right ideas to safely and effectively redevelop Main Street as well as take care of the future costs we are going to incur as part of this road transfer. With regard to finalizing the bridge approach, that work will more safely transfer traffic up to Highway 421, so I'm optimistic that we'll have a good deal all around for the residents of Madison."

OBITUARIES

Barry Case

Barry Michael Case, 70, of Vevay, Indiana, died Wednesday, Oct. 23, 2019, at The Water's of Clifty Falls in Madison, Indiana.

He was born April 18, 1949, in Cincinnati to Walter and Virginia Baurittel Case. He lived his early life in Ohio and later in Kentucky before moving to Vevay in 1996. He made jewelry and was a self-employed salesman all of his life.

Thank You Note

from the family of

Elizabeth Ann Falconberry Burleson DeCarlo

We want to express our gratitude to our friends and family who showed such love and compassion when our Mother passed away.

Special thanks to Dr. Mark Totten for his professionalism and care in treating our Mom. We cannot say enough great things about him, except to say he touched all our lives.

We want to thank River Terrace Health Campus for all the good food, beautiful surroundings, and knowledgeable, competent staff. They took excellent care of our Mother and for that we are eternally thankful.

Morgan & Nay Funeral Centre was excellent. What can be said, "sheer excellence". Rodney exceeded everyone's expectations and our mother was truly beautiful.

Thank You!

UAW OKs GM pact, strike ends; Kokomo workers say no

By CARSON GERBER
Kokomo Tribune

Arbout 250 workers at the Kokomo General Motors Components Holding plant put down their picket signs Friday afternoon, along with about 49,000 other United Auto Worker members, after ratifying a new contract that ends a 40-day strike that paralyzed the company's U.S. production.

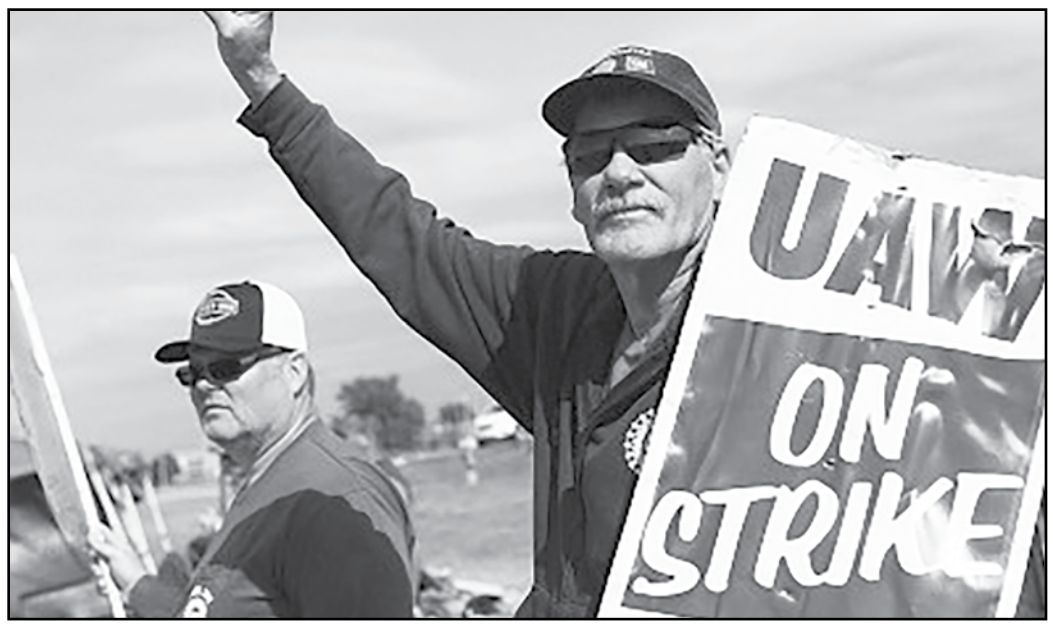
But local workers aren't thrilled with the decision. UAW Local 292 members Friday overwhelmingly voted Friday to reject the contract, with 80% of production workers and 64% of skilled trades voting it down.

Nationally, union members voted in favor or the agreement, with 57.2% of production, skilled and salary workers saying yes to the contract.

UAW Local 292 Shop Chair Greg Wohlford said Friday the biggest reason local workers disapproved of the agreement was the fact it didn't guarantee jobs would stay in Kokomo or any other GM plant and not be shipped to Mexico or other overseas locations.

Under the new contract, workers at GM's Components Holding facilities, which are subsidiaries of the company, will see their max pay capped at $22.50 after working at the company for more than 8 years.

That's about $10 less than GM's non-Component Holdings plants, like the ones in Fort Wayne and Marion, where the top wage is $32.32 per hour.



Mike Stephens, who has worked at GM since 2006, pickets with fellow employees outside the plant on Indiana 931, Tuesday, Oct. 15. Workers will now put down their picket signs after the new contract was ratified and head back to work Monday. (Photo by Kokomo Tribune)

Local hourly worker Butch Bowlin said he voted against the contract because it offered little to Kokomo employees.

"It sucks," he said. "There's nothing for us here ... They didn't give us even a cup of Kool-Aid saying they may be bringing jobs here. We're right at the same place we were at when we went out on strike."

The agreement does give local workers an $11,000 ratification bonus for seniority employees, as well as a 6% pay raise over the next four years and a 4% lump sum payment. It also keeps workers' health coverage intact.

That wasn't enough for worker Ray Byrd to vote for the new contract.

"I don't think it's terrible, but we've been out here striking for a reason, and we didn't gain anything," he said Thursday. "There's nothing in the new contract that benefits us directly. There's stuff in there that's good for GM as a whole, but not this plant here in Kokomo, so there's no reason for us here to vote yes."

Wohlford said local workers may have largely rejected the contract, but now that it's been approved, there are no hard feelings.

"Nationally, the union spoke," he said. "We'll start back to work on Monday and see what we can do. But no matter which way people voted, there are no hard feelings."

The end of the strike will be felt outside the the local plant.

Since workers walked out on Sept. 16, GM's factories have been at a standstill. That means local GM dealerships were no longer getting parts and couldn't fully operate their repair centers.

Wohlford said in a previous interview that one UAW member reported his truck has been at one of the local GM dealerships for over a month because the service department couldn't get the part required to fix it.

Although GM dealers nationally had stocked up on vehicles before the strike and many still have decent supplies, analysts say GM won't be able to make up for the lost production.

Had the strike been shorter, GM could have increased assembly line speeds and worked the plants on overtime to catch up and refill its stock. But many of the plants that make popular SUVs and pickup trucks already were working around the clock to keep up with demand before the strike began.

Also, companies that supply parts to the factories and halted production during the strike will need time to restart, although GM has some parts in stock.

Now, the union will turn its attention to bargaining with Ford Motor Co., using the GM deal as a template. It's not clear yet if there will be another strike, but it's unlikely that Ford will be happy about being stuck with the GM terms.

GM traded the ability to close the three factories in Ohio, Michigan and Maryland for higher labor costs, wrote David Kudla, chief investment strategist for Mainstay Capital Management of Grand Blanc, Michigan, in a note to investors.

The contract maintains worker health benefits with low premiums, something that both Ford and Fiat Chrysler wanted to change when negotiations began.

"Ford and FCA didn't have three factories that they wanted to close, but will have to work around this new framework for higher wages and unchanged health care that the UAW and GM have set," wrote Kudla, whose firm manages investments for many auto industry workers.

Workers at factories that GM will close have been transferred to plants across the nation, and they campaigned against the deal.

But, in the end, economic gains and a $7.7 billion GM investment pledge for U.S. factories were too much to turn down for UAW workers who voted on the new contract.

Who will be the next mayor?

What are the top initiatives you would undertake to spur job growth and economic development?

Berry

"Well first of all, I would say that we have an excellent family of businesses in Jefferson County. We're blessed to have that. We have some homegrown people that have invested and expanded and particularly impressive, have used buildings — dinosaur buildings if you will — that have been long unused on Madison's hilltop, and some also in downtown Madison. That's a good base to build upon. My top initiatives would be several. I'm very interested in that 20-acre-plus hilltop lot on Michigan Road that has become a buy-sell-trade forum or semis and RVs and I'm pretty sure I saw a drug deal go down at when I was at Subway recently. We need to try to attract a mixed use development there and I'm hoping that job creation will be a part of that, as well as possibly some housing and some retail businesses. It's high on the list. I also want to work closely with our family of businesses that I talked about first and see what their needs are and the City of Madison should do everything they can to be helpful to them. I'd like to work hard to get the wage rate up; our median household income lags that of the state of Indiana and we need to make sure that we attract and retain jobs that pay a living wage — a wage that you can raise families on. And lastly — and this may be a little bit out of the box — but I'm interested in helping with economic development through more daycare options, particularly for shift work. It's a real problem, as I've talked to business owners, and I've looked into some grants that can provide either on-site or off-site daycare options for shift work. And I don't think that we can run a daycare, definitely not, but I think that we can be helpful in the formation of the same. As a former Jefferson County commissioner, I will work closely also with Jefferson County. The city and the county are not working together now on economic development. I'll work closely with the schools; I'll be a (mayor) that goes to school board meetings. And I'll work with anybody that can increase and improve the economic development in Madison, Indiana."

Courtney

"The top initiatives that I would undertake in order to spur job growth and economic development have been laid out in my platform that's been for public consumption all year long. I was the only candidate to actually publish a comprehensive platform that focused on three pillars: community safety, economic opportunity and quality of life initiatives. As it relates to economic development and spurring job growth in our community, the pillar of that is economic opportunity. I'll make the distinction there that I want to make sure that our public policy and our economic development efforts reach through to our community in a way that it increases wages and household income. The first thing that I'm going to do is create an office of economic development, and that is designed to better focus our resources. Currently our economic development activity predominantly is outsourced to a third party, and I want to make sure that we're doing all that we can to attract capital and improve wages, deploy public funds, so economic development will be moved to the mayor's office, and then underneath that umbrella will be the lead economic development officer, working with our redevelopment commission, our economic development committee, as well as our building and city planning departments. The whole focus there is to be more proactive and less reactive as well make sure that we're cultivating opportunities that are going to benefit the City of Madison to the maximum extent possible."

"So part of my initiative of bringing economic development into the mayor's office — again, so that we can be more synergetic and more focused in our efforts — I will also be hiring and including under that department an outreach coordinator position with a focus on addiction recovery and adult education. I'll talk more about why that's important later when we deal with some of the issues on crime, substance abuse and homelessness. But the other things that I want to emphasize, too, is that we're going to be more targeted. We're going to have targeted redevelopment areas on the hilltop and downtown. Even though the City of Madison is not part of any specific opportunity zones, for example, we're going to create our own so that we can be more targeted both for redevelopment and new development on the hilltop and downtown. I want to make sure we're leveraging the economic drivers. You know, Madison in a unique community, we're not located on the interstate, but there's a lot of activity happening around us. We are members of the Southern Indiana Regional Development Authority, and I want to make sure we're capturing job opportunities, job growth for example, that are within commuting distance from us. And then lastly, we're going to implement a City of Madison "buy local" purchasing policy. I want to make sure that a lot of the things that we do from a city initiative incorporates and includes our local businesses who are hiring, investing here, paying taxes — we should do things that are in mind with them so we can support the businesses that are supporting our community."

About half of Madison's population lives downtown, yet there has been no grocery downtown for almost two years. What do you plan to do about that?

Berry

"I think we are a victim of a rapidly changing grocery market. One thing that we do have going for us that I think Kroger and Walmart — and I'm not sure about Aldi's — but our grocery stores on the hill do offer pickups that you can do online and possibly are moving into delivery, as some other places are. However, I would like to say that I think it is a top priority. I am one that despite those options of pickup or delivery I like to take a look at my own produce — squeeze the cantalopes if you will and all those things — and I think that the people of downtown Madison deserve that option. I'm actively seeking an energetic person, entrepreneur to take this on. I do think the City of Madison should assist with incentives to help that happen. I am taking a hard look at formerly blighted properties and I'll give you an example, Madison used to have grocery stores downtown on many of our corners. That was a while back and the market in the business industry has changed quite a bit. I'm even taking a look at that former property on West Main Street that I am old enough to remember as the Piggly Wiggly grocery store that my grandmother Dattilo used to take me to. She'd go to Piggly Wiggly for certain things and she'd go to Dave's Shur-Way on the hill for meat, always. I'm hoping that we can work with our farmers market, our Madison co-op for beef production and meat that's currently on the hilltop and I'm hopeful that a young entrepreneur that wants to work hard will take this on and possibly partner with existing grocery stores elsewhere. I've talked to people in counties that surround us and people I know throughout the state who are in the grocery industry. It's an industry that you've got to work really hard at and I believe that we have the hard workers in Madison who can make that happen. We have the need, we have a niche and I think we're going to find that person to do that and I will work tirelessly on it."

Courtney

"It's no secret that over the course of the past three years downtown Madison has not had a grocery store. And although prior administrations have tackled this problem in other ways, we need to make sure we are more focused than ever to bring a downtown grocery store to the City of Madison. Downtown's population represents probably about a third of our community. We cannot have our seniors and our low income people in particular, forced to spend significant resources commuting up on the hilltop for their grocery needs, and particularly while we are encouraging downtown's active lifestyle, we need to make sure we have all the infrastructure necessary to accommodate that population, whether it be a senior who is moving here, a retiree, active lifestyle person and young adults, regardless of your demographics or socioeconomic backgrounds.

"Doing what is necessary to develop a grocery store in downtown Madison is one of the No. 1 priorities for me. I believe it's going to take a different approach. We can't sit back and wait for an operator to decide to come to Madison. We have to be more proactive and put together an incentive plan that requires probably money from our TIF (Tax Increment Financing) program, grant dollars, abatements, infrastrucure improvements and again create a true partnership. One of the things you can expect from a Bob Courtney administration is that we will be proactive. We will not wait for things to happen. We will be making sure that we understand what the community needs are and those will become our highest priority. There's no doubt in my mind that when we're sitting here talking this time next year that the Courtney administration will have a grocery store. Madison already has fruits and vegetables that we can get downtown, you can already get staples and milk, but we don't have a full-service grocery store. I believe that within the year, with the right amount of incentives, we can attact an operator — an experienced operator — to put something new, nice and necessary for downtown Madison. It may be different than what we've experienced before, but it's definitely needed and it's a highest priority for me for downtown Madison."

Much concern has been expressed publicly that the number of homeless people in Madison is increasing. Do you believe that to be true? What will you do to care for those now homeless and to try to make sure the numbers do not increase?

Julie

"I believe that our homelessness in Madison has increased and I think there are a number of factors for it. I would look at our substance abuse, a growing problem, as a factor and I think that contributes to homelessness. The closing of the Victoria Inn contributed particularly downtown. And I'm concerned maybe the most for the children who are caught up in this and are victims of neglect and worse. I would like to point out that the City Madison is addressing it in a form through valiant work by some of our not-for-profit agencies like the Salvation Army, our very strong churches, the Boys & Girls Club — places like that that open up options for people when it gets too hot or too cold so that they don't you know lose their lives. I got a call last night from a friend in Madison because I hosted a community conversation on homelessness in July of this year at Fireman's Park and this person was at that community conversation — we had over a hundred people on an extremely hot night — but people really care about this and it was an opportunity to exchange ideas and suggestions for that. It's become a public safety issue, it's become a public health issue and at that community conversation meeting where we had a panel of a police officer, someone who runs runs a homeless shelter in Jeffersonville and a former homeless person who had worked her way to self-sufficiency as well as representatives of our Salvation Army. This person was there and reached out to me last night because we had a homeless person that was able to get a bed in Ohio County near us that needed transportation. We were able to get that worked out and so that person was given a bed. The homeless shelter in Jeffersonville tells us that they take 30 to 35 people a year from Madison because we don't have a homeless shelter. I'd like to be clear that I don't think the city has the funds or the know-how to build a homeless shelter. I don't rule that out for someone else to do but I don't think that the City of Madison can take that on as our regular responsibility. I think that we can be of help in helping to support the local not-for-profits that are already working on the topic right now and I think that we can try very hard to obtain nearby recovery options for those impacted by substance abuse that want to work toward their recovery and find a place for their children while they're getting through that. But I would like to say that part of the reason of our homeless problwm is a state and national effort to close mental health hospitals — we're a mental health desert here in Jefferson County; we have once certified mental health professional for every like 1,500 people, we've been designated as a mental health desert, and the state and national policies of closing mental health beds and facilities have trickled down to the local areas. We're not the only one with this problem and contributed greatly to our problem of homelessness. I'll work on it tirelessly because I think about it a lot and we do have many people in our community that care very much.

Courtney

"Much concern has been expressed relative to the topic of homelessness in our community. While I agree that we have people who are in unfortunate situations, and I can tell you having spent my 25-year career in developing housing across the country targeting unfortunate populations, low income individuals, homeless, special needs, it's really unfortunate that those individuals do not have a permanent roof over their heads. A stable home environment, stable roof for example, stable living quarters is the one thing that I think everybody deserves. It's the one thing we need to be making sure that we are addressing for our communities. We need to help those in need and also those who are willing to help themselves.

Do we have a major homeless problem? The answer is I don't know. I've committed over the course of my campaign — whether it's dealing with this issue, dealing with economic development, dealing with city finances — to be the mayor that will make the decisions based upon data. The evidence will drive our results, and these will be data-driven results. I did mention earlier that my economic development platform is going to include an outreach coordinator position that will focus on addiction recovery and adult education. And that's an important factor so that we can create sustainable recovery options for those who are in special needs situations. I've also had significant conversations with the director of Indiana Department of Health on how we can bring more mental health resources to our community. I'm confident we can do that. There are several programs available through Indiana and through the federal government that the City of Madison is not taking advantage of yet, such as the student loan repayment program for mental health professionals. We are a federally-designated health professional shortage area, so we will find solutions. Getting back to homelessness, we need to make sure we have the data. The data will drive what our efforts are. And I've indicated that we will have an outreach coordinator position in my administration and one thing we hasn't been done is coordination with all our non-profits that provide invaluable services to our community and for all our residents who are in need. Once we understand the problem better, we can create positive outcomes that will drive down the issue of homelessness. It will also reduce poverty and the other things that we want to do — the things that are sustainable. What we need are sustainable solutions. Permament supported housing if necessary, capitalizing on our relationships and partnerships with our community non-profits. And we also need to do those things that create job opportunities and mental health treatment if necessary. I'm committed to addressing this problem but it's going to take data to find real solutions. We will be proactive in everything we do, not reactive."

Your choice

Berry

"I'm running for mayor of Madison because my skill sets meet the needs of the City of Madison at this time. Right now over one-quarter of the babies born at our local hospital, King's Daughters' Hospital, are born to addicted mothers and are therefore addicted themselves at birth. We've got a real problem here. We have blessings, talent and challenges in Madison and I would like to work on all of those as the mayor. I am the most qualified candidate for mayor. I have a vision for our city, my career has allowed me to see best and worst practices around the state and the Midwest and I'd like to bring that knowledge to my own community which I care about deeply. Madison's finest moments have come when we've put partisanship aside and worked together. Riverfront development, the attraction of industry and expansion of same, restoration of our courthouse after a terrible fire in 2009, our Stellar designation, our America's Best Communities designation, we're at our best when we work together. My private business and my public administration executive experience make me the leader that Madison needs at this time in our history. And Madison has been a place where many historical and great things have happened. We were a leader in the Underground Railroad — one of the most important things during the Civil War and before and after. We've had some historical things happen here and some great people here who have been leaders and stepped up like J.F.D. Lanier financing Indiana's troops in the Civil War when the state of Indiana wouldn't do so or couldn't do so. But I do believe that our best days are not behind us. I believe that our best days are straight ahead and I'd really like to ask humbly for your vote on November 5th to lead Madison forward. Thank you."

Courtney

"I've really appreciated the opportunity to reach out to our community today. I'm Bob Courtney and I've been your candidate for Madison's mayor since last year. Over the course of the past year I've met with literally thousands of you to understand what your needs are. And although I've been a lifelong resident of Madison and I bring a lifetime of experience in the financial sector to our community, I'm committed to finding solutions to grow our community and make sure that we can be the best it can be. Some of those solutions have already been identified along the way. I believe I'm the most experienced person to lead Madison into the future. I have the best education — finance and accounting. I have professional certification. I'm a former licensed certified public accountant. That brings with me a strong sense of how we budget and find the resources to accomplish our goals and objectives. I also have two securities licenses and in my 25-year career in investment banking, I've worked on over $5 billion of deals, negotiating and structuring and finding solutions with non-profits, public housing authorities, government agencies all across the United States and Madison will be my priority.

"I'm a small business owner. My wife and I have been investing in our community for the last 15 years. We started a small business, it's located here on Main Street. We've invested our life's savings in improving our neighborhoods. I'm a volunteer. I've never left my community. Even though I have worked in the financial services sector, I've always volunteered whether it be working with United Way, Red Cross, Sheriff's Merit Board. I was chair of the Madison Board of Zoning Appeals, which gave me keen insight with regard to land use and other ordinances that work well together with all the things we want to do with regard to community safety. I have the relationships that we can bring to Madison to make sure that Madison stays the focal point and we get the resources that we need in order to make the investment that we need to grow our community, improve wages and also invest in our quality of life to attract more population and deal with those things we talked about earlier about making sure that we're creating job opportunities for our youth. We're going to participate with what's going on around us and that's through our regional development authority and working closely with our state legislators and federal legislators. I'm the only candidate with a detailed platform. At bobcourtneyformayor.com you'll see my platform with regard to community safety, economic opportunity and quality of life initiatives. Those are my three guiding principles but there are 20 key initiatives under that and I am the only person who has put forth a thoughtful plan on how we will execute and the leadership style we will bring to the City of Madison. Thank you and I appreciate your vote between now and November 5th."

Cub great Humes headed to SBC Hall of Fame

sports@madisoncourier.com

Former Madison Cub Larry Humes will be enshrined next to some of the best who have ever played the game when he is inducted into the Small College Basketball Hall of Fame on Thursday near Kansas City, Missouri.

Humes graduated from Madison High School in 1962 after leading the Cubs to the state semifinals and earning Mr. Basketball honors. He followed that with a record-setting career at Evansville College where he was a two-time Associated Press Little College All-American and a two-time United Press International Small School All-American.

Humes led the Aces to the NCAA College Division Championship in both the 1964 and 1965 seasons and scored a then school-record 2,236 points. He is still second on the school's all-time list.

Humes had a brief stint with the Indiana Pacers after college but eventually went into coaching both at the high school and collegiate level before retiring.

Joining Humes in this year's class are some of the giants in the sport, led by former University of Kansas coach Phog Allen, considered to be the "Father of Coaching," who coached at Baker University, Haskell Indian Nations and Warrensburg Teachers College before setting off on his legendary career at Kansas.

Other inductees include: Former NBA player World B. Free of Guilford, former Harlem Globetrotter Marques Haynes of Langston, former Wisconsin and Wisconsin-Platteville coach Bo Ryan, Winston-Salem State's Cleo Hill, Oregon Tech coach Danny Miles, North Park's Mike Harper, Hamline's Vern Mikkelsen, Wheaton's Mel Peterson, Evansville's Ed Smallwood; and Winona State's John Smith.

"We are very excited to welcome the Class of 2019 into our Small College Basketball National Hall of Fame," said SCB founder John McCarthy. "This is a tremendously accomplished and impressive class, and I am very thankful to our Hall of Fame Committee, as they have spent a great deal of time researching and analyzing many, many potential candidates for this prestigious induction. Congratulations to every member of this special class."

The induction ceremony will be held at the Missouri Theatre in St. Joseph on Thursday with the SCB Division II Classic being held at the Civic Arena on Friday and Saturday.

A rough season came to a rough end for Madison football in a 61-0 loss to Greenwood in the opening round of the Class 4A Sectional 23 at home on Friday.

The Cubs — who ended the season with six-straight losses, all by at least 28 points — fell behind just over two minutes into the game and couldn't muster any offense as the Woodmen blew the game open in the second quarter to take 42-0 halftime lead and never look back.

It was a disappointing end for the season for the Cubs, who shocked Bedford North Lawrence in the fourth week of the season but had few other positives while finishing 1-9.

"You hate to send (the seniors) out like that. We had some early mistakes in the first half on both sides of the ball that really put us in the hole," Madison coach Leroy Wilson said. "I personally thanked every senior over there for giving everything they had all year and all offseason. It's a huge adjustment having a new coach and those guys adjusted really well."

Playing without leading rusher Ethan Haessig, who was out with a shoulder injury, Greenwood (4-6) put the ball in quarterback Oliver Rau's hands and the senior responded, rushing just eight times but collecting 77 yards while throwing for 125 yards to lead the dominating offensive effort.

Greenwood finished with 327 yards rushing despite Haessig's absence and held Madison to just 67 total yards. The Woodmen attempted only four passes in the game but two of those went for long scores.

Greenwood (4-6) didn't waste very much time getting on the board, driving down the field in just four plays on its opening drive to take a 7-0 lead on a Rau 14-yard scamper just over two minutes into the game.

Rau was intercepted in the end zone on Greenwood's next drive, but then made up for it the next time out by again leading the Woodmen to a quick score when Bryce Hoffman ran the ball in from 19 yards out.

Madison (1-9) never got its offense in gear and Greenwood blew the game open with a big second quarter. Rau scored on a 11-yard run, Jaydin Sheppard hauled in a 58-yard TD pass from Rau, Owen Kendall ripped off a 49-yard run and Rau hit Isaac Turley on a 65-yard pitch and catch for the score. Luke Roscoe provided the extra point on each touchdown.

Leading 42-0 at halftime, the Woodmen substituted liberally over the final 24 minutes yet still managed to add onto the lead, getting a 10-yard touchdown run by quarterback Luke Hommell in the third, a 52-yard run by Scott Raker in the fourth and a fumble recovery in the end zone by Nash Peterson late in the game.

Greenwood advances to the semifinals next Friday where it will host Class 4A No. 2 East Central. The Trojans (10-0) hammered Silver Creek 28-0 in their quarterfinal matchup Friday at home.

CROSS COUNTRY ROUNDUP

Trimble boys win regional title

Season ends for Indiana runners at semistate

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Trimble County's boys took three of the top six positions to claim the KHSAA Region 5 Class A Cross Country title at Bourbon County High School in Paris on Saturday.

Freshman Jessup Smith was second overall in 17:08.73, sophomore Matthew Craig was third in 17:11.27 and junior Alex Seward ran sixth in 17:33.16 as the Raiders scored 63 points to edge Lexington Christian by four points.

Michael Kainer placed 14th in 18:17.49 and Brayden Taylor was 44th in 20:10.61 to round out Trimble's scoring. In non-scoring runs, Luke Mullins was 58th in 21:40.89 and Keegan Congleton was 59th in 21:43.87.

Connor Hayes of Lexington Christian won the race in 15:59.34.

On the girls side, Rebecca Kainer finished second in 19:42.31 and three others placed in the top 12 as Trimble finished second overall with 56 points. Lexington Christian won the regional title with 27 points.

Following Rebecca Kainer, Kinley Kunkel was seventh in 20:08.64, Eliza Weston was ninth in 20:57.10, Meagan Kainer was 12th in 21:49.85 and Addison Phelps was 38th in 24:16.67.

Carroll County's Sarah Marshall, a junior, qualified for the Class A state finals by running 16th in 22:11.61. Carroll was 10th as a team.

Anna Rupp of Lexington Christian won the girls race in 18:54.53.

Ramsey's career day lifts Hoosiers

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Indiana players started celebrating before the clock struck zeroes, and as they headed to the locker room they continued to whoop and holler.

"We're going bowling," they yelled.

Yes, they are. It's not even November, and the Hoosiers have achieved the six wins needed to play in a bowl for the first time since 2016.

Leading the way in Saturday's 38-31 win over Nebraska was Peyton Ramsey, the starting quarterback for two years before getting beat out in the preseason. Starting for the third time this season in place of the injured Michael Penix Jr., Ramsey passed for a career-high 351 yards and two touchdowns.

"Being so far from home, being our first time here at Nebraska, it was awesome," Ramsey said. "It was a fun deal and we're going to celebrate it."

The Hoosiers certainly did.

"You should have seen us in the locker room after the game," said Whop Philyor, who caught 14 passes for 178 yards. "We were going crazy. It was chaos."

The Hoosiers (6-2, 3-2 Big Ten) won a third straight conference game in the same season for the first time since 1993 and won in Lincoln for the first time since 1959.

"It feels pretty stinking good to stand here and answer your questions after a big-time road win," Allen told reporters. "This is a big-time win. It changes a lot for our program."

Nebraska (4-4, 2-3) lost its second straight, and second-year coach Scott Frost lamented two turnovers that were converted into touchdowns, breakdowns in pass defense, a missed field goal and poor punt that gave Indiana a short field for a scoring drive.

"It's frustrating," Frost said. "We've got a lot of guys on this team who really care. We have some guys who are tough and dedicated enough. We don't have enough of them yet."

Philyor caught 14 balls in a game for the second time this season as the Hoosiers riddled Nebraska with crossing routes and a variety of other short passes.

"It's so inspiring to watch," Ramsey said. "He's a tough little dude. He's a fun guy to throw the ball to. You know you're going to get yards after the catch."

HANOVER ROUNDUP

Panthers overpower Manchester to take sole possession of HCAC

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Hanover racked up more than 600 yards of total offense and limited Manchester to under 200 as the Panthers overpowered the Spartans 56-7 at Alumni Stadium on Saturday afternoon in Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference football action.

Manchester, which had upset Franklin 30-21 a week ago, looked to threaten Hanover's unbeaten mark in the HCAC but the Panthers never allowed the upset to unfold and picked up their sixth-straight win to stand as the lone unbeaten team in the conference at 4-0.

Within seven minutes, Hanover had built a 14-0 lead. Shawn Coane ran for a 21-yard touchdown with 11:11 on the clock and the Panthers needed just two plays to hit the end zone again on their following drive when Noah Wezensky found Jared Frank deep for a 47-yard touchdown pass.

By the end of the quarter, Hanover had expanded the lead again when Wezensky went to the air to find Conner Gibson on a 28-yard TD. Austin Steurer connected on his third extra point and the advantage was 21-0 at the end of the first quarter.

Manchester (2-5, 1-3 HCAC) finally got on the board early in the second quarter on a 32-yard quarterback keeper by Austin Roberts and extra point by Andrew Kibler to trim the deficit to 21-7 but the Panthers quickly answered. Coane and Walt Ballinger ran for a 58-yard touchdown each, kick-starting a 28 point frame that included two more touchdown passes by Wezensky for a 49-7 halftime lead.

Hanover added one more score in the second half on Coane's third touchdown run of the day in the third quarter and managed to hold the Spartans scoreless over the final two quarters.

HCAC FOOTBALL Standings

	HCAC	ALL
Hanover	4-0	6-1
Mt. St. Joseph	4-1	6-1
Rose-Hulman	4-1	5-2
Franklin	3-2	4-4
Manchester	1-3	2-5
Bluffton	1-3	1-6
Anderson	1-4	3-5
Defiance	0-4	0-7

The Panthers finished the day with a season-high 618 yards total offense and balanced out the pass and run in the process. Wezensky, who played just the first half, went 13-of-20 passing for 238 yards and four touchdowns with his top target, Gibson, picking up five catches for 71 yards and two scores. Frank and Taylor Blestein each had 56 receiving yards and a score.

Coane finished with 14 carries for 184 yards and three scores and Ballinger had one score on eight touches for 102 yards. Hanover finished the day with a season-high 355 rushing yards.

Defensively, the Panthers held Manchester to just 136 total yards on offense, including a negative mark in the passing game. Roberts was 2-for-10 for minus-11 yards and an interception while backup Alex Downard was 0-of-2 passing. The Spartans came into Saturday averaging 156 rushing yards per game and picked up 147 against the Panthers, with most coming late in the second half.

Backup running back Christian Smith had 23 carries for 75 yards while starting running back Donavan Henderson Jr. was limited to 32 yards on 16 carries for the Spartans. Henderson had the only two receptions for Manchester on the day.

Kyle Treber led Hanover with nine tackles and shared a sack with B.J. Williams, who had four tackles of his own. Kiefer Askew had an interception and Ben Panitz had a fumble recovery. Carson Plessinger made seven tackles and Cam Maier added eight tackles.

Hanover (6-1, 4-0 HCAC) visits Mt. St. Joseph (Ohio) on Saturday. The previously unbeaten Lions lost 29-8 at Rose-Hulman Saturday to fall into a two-way tie with Rose for second in the HCAC at 4-1.

Soccer men beat Ravens

Hanover outshot Anderson 25-3 overall and picked up a 2-0 win at home in men's soccer Saturday.

The Panthers, who also held a 17-1 advantage in shots on goal and 13-3 in corner kicks, got the game-winner in the 19th minute by Josh Hughes and an insurance marker in the 58th minute from Fernando Martin.

Will Bedel needed only one save in goal to claim the win for the Panthers.

Hanover improved to 9-5-1 overall and 6-1 in the HCAC with the win. The Panthers are currently in a three-way tie atop the league standings with Rose-Hulman and Transylvania. Hanover wraps up the regular season at Mount St. Joseph Wednesday and at Defiance Saturday.

Women tie Anderson

Hanover and Anderson each scored first-half goals and nothing else in a 1-1 women's soccer tie Saturday on campus.

The Ravens struck first with a goal by Morgan Reed in the 26th minute. Maggie Day tied the score for Hanover in the 32nd minute on an assist from Josie Dattilo.

Neither team scored over the final 59 minutes of regulation or two overtimes to end tied.

Hanover held a substantial 19-8 edge in overall shots but attempts on goal were even at 7-7. Amanda Carmosino stopped six shots for the Panthers.

Hanover, 8-5-2 overall and 5-1-1 HCAC, stands three points back of leader Rose-Hulman with two matches to play. The Panthers host Mount St. Joseph Wednesday and wrap up the regular season at Defiance Saturday.

Volleyball swept 3-0

Hanover played two close sets with host Rose-Hulman but ultimately dropped three-straight in volleyball Saturday in Terre Haute.

The Panthers lost the opener 25-21 and the second 25-23. The Fightin' Engineers then rolled 25-13 in the third and deciding set.

Emma Rolf had eight kills while Adrianne Vance had seven kills for the Panthers. Ally Williams added 19 digs and Kelsey Ketcham had 26 assists.

Hanover, 15-10 overall, 4-2 HCAC, stands two games back of Transylvania in the conference. The Panthers host Franklin Tuesday, Manchester Friday and Anderson Saturday to wrap up the regular season.

Vinatieri's kick gives Colts win

By MICHAEL MAROT
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Indianapolis Colts coach Frank Reich was so confident in Adam Vinatieri, he opted to play for a long field goal Sunday.

Even after the NFL's career scoring leader opened the game by missing a 45-yard field goal wide right. Even after the league's best clutch kicker missed the tying extra point in the third quarter.

Eventually, Vinatieri rewarded Reich's faith. In his 200th career game with the Colts, Vinatieri made a 51-yard field goal with 22 seconds left to give Indy a 15-13 come-from-behind victory over the Denver Broncos.

"I knew we were inside Vinny's range," Reich said. "I knew that was money for Adam. I knew that."

For most of Vinatieri's first 23 seasons, every coach in the league would have agreed with Reich's statement.

This season has made some wonder about Vinatieri's reliability. He missed five of eight kicks in the first two weeks before seemingly settling with only one miss — a long field goal — in Indy's next four games.

Then came the two misses Sunday and suddenly everyone outside the Colts' organization held their collective breath when Reich called two runs from just inside the Broncos 35 in the final 73 seconds. But Vinatieri delivered by again living up to his reputation.

"Honestly, you have to have a short memory, good or bad," he said. "I guess for me, the only thing I try to think about is my fundamentals and what I need to do right there at that moment and try not to think about the situation in the game and what it means. I just try to focus in on my little world."

The final kick gave Indy (5-2) a third straight win and kept it atop the AFC South.

Meanwhile, in Denver, it was another wrenching blow. The Broncos (2-6) lost their second straight overall and their third this season in the final 30 seconds.

And now there appears to be questions from inside the locker room about playing too cautiously.

When Denver took over at the Colts 48 midway through the fourth quarter, the Broncos called two short passes and one run before punting. When the Broncos took over at their own 38 with 3:37 left, they called four runs and one short pass before another punt.

"I just look at it like we're now a 2-6 football team and we're like afraid to go for it in a 2-minute drill," quarterback Joe Flacco said. "Who cares if you give it back to the guys with 1:40 left? They obviously got the field goal anyway. Once again, we're a 2-6 football team and it just feels like we're kind of afraid to lose a game."

Flacco did what he could, but Denver settled for two short, first-half field goals — one capping a 17-play drive that consumed nearly eight minutes, the other to finish a 13-play drive that took another 5½ minutes.

Vinatieri made it 6-3 at the half with a 55-yard field goal.

After the Broncos opened the second half with a 4-yard TD run from Royce Freeman , Vinatieri made a 45-yard field goal and Marlon Mack's 10-yard TD run made it 13-12. That's the way it stayed — until Vinatieri took advantage of his final shot.

Bengals look for positives despite loss

By MATTIAS KAREN
Associated Press

LONDON — Even at 0-8, Andy Dalton is doing his best to look for some positives.

A run game that seems to finally be making some progress. An aggressive game plan that saw the Cincinnati Bengals go for it six times on fourth down — converting four of them. No turnovers. And a locker room that shows no sign of quitting on the season.

None of that was enough on Sunday, though, as the Bengals gave up 470 yards in a 24-10 loss to the Los Angeles Rams (5-3) in London to remain winless.

"I've obviously never been in a situation like this before," said Dalton, who is the only quarterback since 1950 to record both an 0-8 record and an 8-0 record in the first eight games of a season. "So this is new, but we keep saying it every week. ... Our mentality, everything, has been very positive. There's been nothing from this team that has gone in the tank, given up."

Against the reigning NFC champions, the Bengals even held their own for much of the first half. Dalton led a 75-yard touchdown drive in the second quarter to tie the game at 10-10, and the team's running game was productive for once, finishing with 104 yards.

But Jared Goff hit Cooper Kupp for a 65-yard score on a double reverse flea-flicker on the following drive, and the Bengals couldn't find a reply. Kupp finished with a career-high 220 yards as the Bengals defense was repeatedly beat in the air.

The Rams came up with a stop on fourth-and-goal from the 6-yard line with five minutes left in the fourth quarter to thwart any hopes of a comeback by the Bengals. Auden Tate thought he had caught a touchdown with 4 seconds remaining, but the pass was ruled incomplete after a review.

Dalton finished 32 of 52 for 329 yards and had a 1-yard touchdown pass to Joe Mixon.

"I mean, there's been a lot of 0-7 teams that would have gone to a game like this and could have gotten blown out," Dalton said. "I feel like we were right in this game for a majority of the game. That's a testament to the guys we have on this team."

The Bengals now have a bye week to recharge for the second half of a season that can already be written off. But first-year head coach Zac Taylor also insisted that there'll be no tanking the rest of the way.

"I'm not in the least bit discouraged with the guys. I do feel like we're close," Taylor said. "People probably don't want to hear that, but we're giving ourselves a chance. ... We're halfway through the season, but these guys are hungry for a win. They're hungry to show the world that we're improving and that we've got a good team here."

Taylor also confirmed that team isn't looking to make any major trades before Tuesday's deadline — even though other teams are interested in snapping up some of their players.

"There are some key players that we feel like are critical to our success this year, critical to our future," he said. "So that makes for an easy decision."

The biggest positive for the Bengals may be that A.J. Green is getting closer to a comeback. The star wide receiver has yet to play this season after having ankle surgery during training camp but could be ready after the bye week.

"I think he feels encouraged that he's headed in the right direction, but I don't want to put a timetable on it, guarantee anything," Taylor said. "But he's making good progress."

The Class A State Finals will be run at the Kentucky Horse Park in Lexington on Saturday. The girls race will begin at 9:30 a.m.

Shawe's Alderman 51st

The cross country season came to an end for five Courierarea athletes at the IHSAA Semistate on a rainy Saturday in Brown County.

Shawe freshman Calli Alderman placed 51st in the girls race in 20:43.4 while Switzerland County freshman Grace White was 68th in 21:15.6. Madison junior Brett Cahall ran 105th in 21:55.0.

"Calli had an outstanding freshman season," Shawe coach Jim Leveille said. "Today was a hard and wet day but it has incentivized her to finish the process by going into next season to complete the road to the state meet. We are all very proud of her at Shawe."

On the boys side, Southwestern's Gavyn Mundt and Trevor Smith nearly crossed the line at the same time with Mundt running122nd in 18:01.1 and Smith 124th at 18:01.8.

Bloomington South won the boys team championship with 77 points, just two better than runner-up Columbus North. Bloomington North's Paul Rushton won the individual title in 15:50.6.

Columbus North won the girls title with 57 points and Bloomington North was second with 76. Annalyssa Crain of Edgewood was the top individual at 18:02.6.

STATE OF INDIANA
IN THE JEFFERSON CIRCUIT COURT
SS:
COUNTY OF JEFFERSON
CAUSE NUMBER:
39C01-1907-JC-00066
IN THE MATTER OF:
LJC - DOB 8/8/2014
A CHILD ALLEGED TO BE A CHILD IN NEED OF SERVICES AND
Erica Case (Biological Mother)
Andrew Wayne Carter (Alleged Father) And Any Unknown Alleged Fathers

SUMMONS FOR SERVICE BY PUBLICATION & NOTICE OF child IN NEED OF SERVICES HEARING

TO:
Andrew Wayne Carter and Any Unknown Alleged Father
Whereabouts unknown

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to the above noted parent whose whereabouts are unknown, as well as Any Unknown Alleged Fathers, whose whereabouts are also unknown, that the Indiana Department of Child Services has filed its Verified Petition Alleging the child to be in Need of Services, in accordance with I.C. 31-34-9-3, and that an adjudication hearing has been scheduled with the Court.

YOU ARE HEREBY COMMANDED to appear before the Judge of the Jefferson Circuit Court, 300 East Main Street, Madison, IN 47250-3537 - 812-265-8930 for a(n) Fact Finding Hearing on 12/12/2019 at 11:00 AM. At said hearing, the Court will consider the Petition and evidence thereon and will render its decision as to whether the above named minor child is child in need of services and shall enter adjudication accordingly. Your failure to appear after lawful notice will be deemed as your default and waiver to be present at said hearing.

UPON ENTRY OF SAID ADJUDICATION, A DISPOSITIONAL HEARING will be held in which the Court will consider (1) Alternatives for the care, treatment, or rehabilitation for the child; (2) The necessity, nature, and extent of your participation in the program of care, treatment, or rehabilitation for the child; and (3) Your financial responsibility for any services provided for the parent, guardian or custodian of the child including child support.

YOU MUST RESPOND by appearing in person or by an attorney within thirty (30) days after the last publication of this notice, and in the event you fail to do so, an adjudication on said petition, judgment by default may be entered against you, or the court may proceed in your absence, without further notice.

where the focus will be to continue the strides it's made this season. While the Cubs won only one game, several freshmen and sophomores picked up valuable playing experience that is not usually reserved for younger players.

"We're going to have to regroup, re-focus and reflect and there is going to be a lot of evaluation," Wilson said. "We have a very young team and it's going to be very interesting to see how we handle an offseason. It's going to be new for all of us, so we've got to have a lot of hard work in the weight room and come spring ball see where we're at. It all starts at the bottom. We've got to get in the junior high and have it trickle on down. That's the key."

2A FOOTBALL SECTIONAL

Paoli rolls to 66-7 win over Pacers

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Switzerland County's football season came to an end on Friday with a 66-7 loss at home to Paoli in opening round of the IHSAA Class 2A Sectional.

The Rams took control of the game early, scoring three touchdowns and getting three 2-point conversions to lead 24-0 after the first quarter. Paoli added 20 more points in the second quarter and led 44-0 at halftime.

The lead reached 66-0 before Switzerland finally broke up the shutout with a 41-yard touchdown pass from Damion Courter to Hunter Records with 3:25 left in the game.

Paoli (6-4) advances to the semifinals where it will host Triton Central (7-3) this Friday. The Tigers whipped Mitchell 49-16 in the opening round.

Switzerland County ends the season with 5-5 record, the second-straight year the Pacers have finished with a .500 mark.

Halloween is around the corner

Trick-or-treat times and advice for a safe, spooky night

Courier staff report

The time for candy, costumes and trick-or-treating has started as children and guardians prepare for Halloween. As children start to ask for candy, the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) has released a few tips and tricks to create a safe and fun holiday.

The AAP suggests that children and adults wear plain costumes that are bright and reflective, shoes fit well and that costumes are short enough to prevent tripping, entanglement or contact with flames. Reflective tape can be added to costumes or bags for greater visibility.

Since masks can limit or block eyesight, consider non-toxic makeup and decorative hats as safer alternatives. Hats should fit properly and makeup should be tested ahead of time on a small patch of skin to ensure that it is safe to use.

Make sure costumes, wigs and accessories are flame-resistant. If a sword, cane or stick is part of a costume, make sure it is not sharp or long. A child may be easily hurt by accessories or costumes if they stumble or trip.

The AAP also suggests that people do not use decorative contact lenses without an eye examination and a prescription from an eye care professional.

Guardians also need to review with children how to call 9-1-1 or other local emergency numbers if they ever have an emergency or become lost.

To keep homes safe for visiting trick or treaters, the AAP says parents should remove anything a child could trip over on porches and front yards. Parents should also check outdoor lights and replace burned-out bulbs.

Wet leaves should be swept from sidewalks and steps and pets should be restrained so they do not inadvertently jump on or bite a trick-or-treater.

For Halloween trick-or-treating, parents or responsible adults should always accompany young children on their neighborhood rounds. Flashlights with fresh batteries should be carried by all children and their escorts.

If older children are going alone, plan and review the route that is acceptable to parents or guardians and agree on a specific time when they should return home.

Only go to homes with a porch light on and never enter a home or car for a treat.

BRIDGE

DO YOU LEAD THIS, THAT OR THE OTHER?

William Jennings Bryan, who was the Democratic Party's presidential nominee three times, said, "Destiny is not a matter of chance; it is a matter of choice. It is not a thing to be waited for; it is a thing to be achieved."

As we are noting this week, the destiny of a contract can rest not only on the choice of opening lead but also on how third hand reacts. In today's deal, what should West lead against four spades after the given auction?

North's four-spade rebid was cautious. If South had weak clubs, they would have a slam. North should have rebid four clubs, a splinter bid showing a singleton or void in clubs, four-card spade support and at least enough values for game. Yes, responder may make a splinter in opener's first-bid suit. Just picture South with the spade ace-queen and diamond ace-king. Then seven spades would have play.

West should think about each suit. A club is poor because it is declarer's first-bid suit. Similarly, the heart queen, which looks superficially attractive, is also not recommended, because North bid the suit. A trump is potentially suicidal, maybe saving declarer a guess in the suit. That leaves diamonds, and because West has an honor in the suit, he should select the two.

Then the spotlight turns to East. The low-diamond lead in an unbid suit guarantees at least one honor in that suit. So East should confidently play his jack. Yes, perhaps partner has led from a 10-high suit, but if so, he found an unsuccessful start!

The defenders take three diamond tricks now and wait for a trump winner.

Advice for family member with OCD

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: I'd like to hear from people who were children of a mother with Contamination OCD. My daughter's therapist determined it is a pretty severe case, but my daughter refuses to go to the recommended hospital program. Instead, she sees the therapist once a week, which is basically a whack-a-mole approach. One issue gets better and another pops up. She's had this for more than five years and refuses any medication.

My concern beyond her is for my grandchildren, ages 2 1/2 and 5. I can't go into all the avoidance and bizarre actions and behaviors, but her behavior injects a lot of anxiety and stress into their lives that they wouldn't have otherwise.

Before we knew what we were dealing with, our family would do the worst thing by offering assurances and accommodation. Her husband is totally under her OCD's control. According to her therapist, he should take the kids and leave to prompt her to really get help. It seems he can't bring himself to do that. I am afraid the kids will end up suffering from OCD as well.

I'm considering going through the court system to get the kids out of this situation.

When I brought up this concern with a therapist, she said research isn't conclusive of the effect on the kids. I don't want to gamble with their development and find out 10 years later that I should have rescued my grandchildren — and my daughter.

I'd like to hear from people who have lived with this situation as children and what would they recommend.

I want my real daughter back and for her to live her best life with her family. — Grandma Blindsided by Mental Health Issue

Dear Blindsided Grandma: Your daughter's Contamination OCD, an extreme fear of being contaminated by germs, has created a very difficult situation that is taking a toll on the whole family. You are wise to try to get help for your daughter and grandchildren. Try to remember, though, even when she is sick or in the throws of an OCD episode, she still is your "real daughter." The disease is simply taking over at that moment. Continue what you are doing by speaking with her husband and listening to any suggestions your professional therapist has.

I wish you the best of luck. So, dear readers, if any of you have had experience with family members suffering from Contamination OCD, what has worked for them during these episodes? Also, if you grew up in a household in which one of your parents had Contamination OCD, we'd love to hear about your experiences and any advice you might have.

Dear Annie: When you told "Sweet Tooth" to eat sweets with honey or syrup instead of cane sugar, I thought I should write in to share that it won't help her problem. The body recognizes all these — sugar, syrups, agave, honey, etc. — as the same thing. (It is true that the glycemic index is lower on some of these than on cane sugar, but that only means the body processes it more slowly, so you don't get the sugar "crash." It still has the same addictive effect on the body)

Addiction to sugar is a documented addiction. The sugar (be it cane or any other kind) sets up a craving for more sugar, and things just run out of control! — Been There, Done That in New Mexico

Dear Been There, Done That: Thank you for writing in to share about how our bodies process all types of sugar, especially with Halloween right around the corner.

"Ask Me Anything: A Year of Advice From Dear Annie" is out now!
